

Advisor of the Month

March 2019

Amy Kimball
Lead Advisor
Health, Society & Policy

Advisor of the Month is an award in which staff on campus who have academic advising roles can give their advising peers recognition for their ability to go above and beyond in their roles and with students.

March's Advisor of the Month is Amy Kimball, Academic Advisor in the College of Social & Behavioral Science, and is the Lead Advisor for Health, Society & Policy. One of her nominations demonstrates the how much knowledge she possesses and how she challenges and supports each of her students:

"I cannot think of a better example of someone who is helping students to be the solution than Amy. I have had the opportunity to observe many of her advising appointments, and I am stunned by how much knowledge she has in the field of human health, and how she gently encourages her students to think about how they want to contribute to that broad and ever-changing field. Amy's students and colleagues absolutely adore her."

Amy joined the Health, Society & Policy program as its academic advisor in 2013. She graduated from the University of Utah and enjoys every day being back on campus working with students. Amy shared the following about her own advising:

"After working for 12 years in advertising, I was led by the desire to work with people one-on-one—preferably from diverse backgrounds. I found that opportunity in academic advising and it quickly became a passion. It is an honor to work with so many amazing students; I am deeply inspired by each one's unique talent and genius. My career focus is to help them see and maximize their highest potential."
